

Carl Albright: We worked together at ICS many years ago. He is a very engaging and charming guy and we were good buddies all the time that I worked at ICS. Most of the time we had lunch together. We went to Weston Field, almost always, and went swimming before lunch. I came across his name in the LinkedIn materials on-line and decided to contact him again.

In early December, I chanced to see the Penn Foster photo in the December 11, 2012 issue of the Scranton Times. Carl in there on the far right in the back row.

On January 5, at 6:04 A.M., via LinkedIn, I sent Carl the following message, with the title "Survival Skills Expert":

January 5, 2013

Carl:

You are an amazing human being.

Robert

On January 7th, Carl replied:

Carl:

This is an e-mail test.

"albright@nep.net" is no longer a valid e-mail address?

Saw your photo with the Penn Foster group in the December 11th issue of the Scranton paper (electronic copy attached). And then a couple of days ago, you appeared in the LinkedIn materials on my screen.

The universe is sending me a message, and that message is: contact Carl Albright.

Hope you and your family are all well and that 2013 is the best year ever for all of you.

Best,

Robert

Hi Robert,

The albright@nep.net address has ended up being the one that my wife uses for her early intervention work.

Thanks for sending the picture--I had heard about it a couple times, but hadn't seen it.

Happy New Year to you and yours as well!

Carl
